
Bus

Taipei City and New Taipei bus network — routes, operators and garages.
Not yet written.

Planned for v2. Nothing in this section is written yet. What follows is what it will cover and why it does not exist — stated deliberately, rather than left as an empty listing.

Nothing here yet. This section is planned for the second version of the site, and it is listed now rather than hidden because leaving it out would misrepresent what the site is for: the bus network carries a large share of Taipei's daily journeys, and a guide that quietly stopped at rail would be a metro guide calling itself a transit guide.

What it will cover

Routes. The trunk corridors first — the numbered services and the bus lanes along Zhongxiao, Renai, Xinyi and Nanjing — rather than an attempt at all of them. Taipei City and New Taipei between them run several hundred routes, and a few hundred stub pages would be worth less than twenty written ones.

Operators. More than a dozen companies work the network under contract, each with its own fleet, liveries and garages. The relationships between them are poorly documented in English, which makes this the part most likely to be worth reading rather than merely present.

Fares and payment. Section-based fares, the EasyCard transfer discount between bus and metro, and where the section boundaries actually fall — which is the thing visitors get wrong most often.

Why it is not written yet

Because the rail side is not finished. Starting a second section before the first is sound would produce two half-guides instead of one good one, and the Wenhua Line pages are still stubs carrying figures marked TBC.

There is also a sourcing problem specific to buses that rail does not have. Metro station data comes from MOTC's open data platform: authoritative, stable, and slow to change. Bus route data is published per-operator and per-municipality, changes far more often, and the English-language versions of it go out of date quickly. Covering it honestly needs a data pipeline rather than a transcription, and building one before there is anything to put through it would be the wrong order of work.

See about [\[/about/\]](/about/) for how this site sources material, and the network [\[/train/network/\]](/train/network/) for what is covered today.

Routes

Individual bus routes — operator, corridor, stop list and frequency. Planned for v2.

Operators

Bus companies working the Taipei network, their fleets and depots. Planned for v2.

An independent, non-commercial reference site. Not affiliated with Taipei Rapid Transit Corporation, Taipei City Government, or any bus operator. Line colours are the official values published by each operator through Taiwan MOTC's open data platform. About this site.

Station names, codes and sequence from TDX Transport Data eXchange, Ministry of Transportation and Communications, operator TRTC. Government open data. Retrieved 2026-08-05; source last updated 2020-01-31. Provenance.