Penghu island ferry services

Public and visitor ferry services linking Magong with Penghu's inhabited islands, the southern islands and Taiwan, with dated schedules, fares and weather limits.

PENGHU ISLAND FERRY SERVICES
CORE SOUTH-SEA SERVICE Magong–Wangan–Qimei ^[4]	RETRIEVED SCHEDULE WINDOW 2026-08-26 to 2026-09-01 ^[4]	MAGONG–QIMEI ADULT FARE IN THE OFFICIAL VISITOR GUIDE NT$437 ^[6]

Penghu's ferry network is an island service, not one route. The official visitor information divides island-hopping departures between the North Sea Visitor Centre at Chikan, the East Sea Visitor Centre at Qitou and the South Sea Visitor Centre at Magong's Third Fishing Port; it warns that schedules change with the season and weather.^[6] This page therefore separates the county's public transport boats from private island-hopping packages and keeps every date attached to the schedule it describes.

The county's South Sea public service

The Public Vehicle and Ship Management Office's live timetable displayed a query for 26 August–1 September 2026 when fetched on 26 August.^[4] It lists 南海之星2號 (Nanhai Star No. 2), 海有1, the Friday special boat 亞曼尼, and overnight 七美 sailings, so the week is not a single repeating table.^[4] The regular pattern shown for 26 August, 29 August, 30 August and 1 September is Magong 09:30, Wangan 10:20, Wangan 10:50, Qimei 11:35, Qimei 13:30, Wangan 14:15, Wangan 14:30 and Magong 15:20.^[4] On 27 August, the same page instead shows a service continuing from Qimei to Kaohsiung, with Qimei at 12:30 and Kaohsiung at 15:10.^[4] Its 28 August listing includes a Kaohsiung departure at 09:50, Qimei at 12:40, Wangan at 14:50 and Magong at 16:20.^[4]

These are dated departures, not a promise that a boat will run regardless of conditions. The live page says the Magong–Wangan–Qimei service stops at wave height of 3 metres or wind above 15.6 m/s, the Qimei–Kaohsiung service stops above 13.6 m/s, and overnight or Friday-special services stop above 10.5 m/s; the captain may also decide from sea conditions.^[4] The same page notes that the boats carry both passengers and cargo, so heavy loading can delay departure, and that charter or weather-affected services may be adjusted.^[4]

Tickets, reservations and island fares

The county's ticket guidance, effective from 19 July 2025, says that outbound travel to Wangan or Qimei is sold in a queue rather than by reservation, with priority for registered residents and students when seats are limited.^[5] Return reservations are accepted online after the timetable is announced; the guidance allocates 60 online places per sailing, 30 for Wangan and 30 for Qimei, with a maximum of four tickets per person.^[5] Online purchase closes at 21:00 on the day before sailing, and a mobile QR ticket plus identity document can be used for boarding.^[5] The ticket guidance says a ticket is valid only for its date and sailing, with a 10% refund fee before departure and no fee when a sailing is cancelled for typhoon or other force majeure, subject to its stated refund window.^[5]

The National Scenic Area Administration's island-transport table gives the following published one-way values. It directs readers to the responsible authority for the live operating rules and timetable.^[6]

SERVICE	PUBLISHED ONE-WAY FAREAUTHORITY NAMED FOR THE TIMETABLE
Magong–Tongpan	NT$120Magong City Office ^[6]
Magong–Hujing	NT$120Magong City Office ^[6]
Magong–Wangan	NT$272Public Vehicle and Ship Management Office ^[6]
Magong–Qimei	NT$437Public Vehicle and Ship Management Office ^[6]
Wangan–Qimei	NT$167Public Vehicle and Ship Management Office ^[6]
Magong–Southern Four Islands	NT$460Wangan Township Office ^[6]

The same guide lists a separate Southern Four Islands entry for Magong–Wangan at NT$300, alongside the NT$460 Magong–Southern Four Islands value.^[6] Those entries describe different service categories in the guide; they should not be silently collapsed into one fare. The page links to Magong's Tongpan and Hujing timetable and to Wangan Township's Southern Four Islands timetable, but the two linked municipal pages timed out during this verification, so current departure times for those services remain TBC.^[6]

Reaching Penghu from Taiwan

The National Scenic Area Administration describes a seasonal mainland-island pattern. Light passenger ferries operate in summer between Chiayi [</rail/thsr/stations/chiayi/>]'s Budai Port and Magong, with an approximate crossing time of 90 minutes; in winter, it says the Taiwan Navigation Penghu ferry is the remaining regular sea option between Kaohsiung's Xinbin Pier and Magong, taking about four hours, with summer night voyages also possible.^[7] Its port table also lists Budai–Longmen, Kaohsiung–Qimei/Wangan/Magong and Tainan–Dongji links.^[7] The same official page names Taiwan Navigation, Hai An Hai You, Manten Star, Kaixuan, Bailey and Yongjie as the operator families associated with the listed routes and vessels.^[7]

The page itself says that mainland sailing changes with season and weather, so the operator list is an orientation index rather than a live departure board.^[7] For the same reason, this guide does not invent a year-round frequency, vessel capacity, or a guaranteed ferry-to-airport connection. Those fields need a dated operator timetable or a live official query before they can be promoted.

The Kaohsiung ferry's vessel history

The "Taiwan Navigation Penghu ferry" named above as the winter mainland-island option is 澎湖輪 (Penghu Wheel), which made its maiden voyage from Kaohsiung to Magong on 5 September 2023 after Taiwan Navigation (台航) was selected by MOTC in a May 2021 tender for the route's long-term operation; the vessel was built by Naikai Zosen in Japan and carries 600 passengers on a 9,932-ton hull, 119.99 m long, with capacity for 4 tour buses, 82 cars and 10 twenty-foot containers.^[1] A pre-delivery news report gave slightly different construction-contract specifications — 9,980 tons and a 600-plus-passenger figure that included a stated 300-berth sleeping section — which this page reports alongside the operator's own as-delivered figures rather than treating as the same measurement.^[2]

Penghu Wheel replaced 臺華輪 (Taihua), which had served the Kaohsiung–Magong route for 34 years after completion in Nagasaki in September 1989, making its final sailing on 23 August 2023 before being sent to Bangladesh for scrapping.^[3]

What remains date-sensitive

The county's live page is the source for the displayed 26 August–1 September week, while the ticket guidance is an effective-date document from July 2025; neither should be read as a permanent timetable.^[4]^[5] The live page and the older ticket PDF also publish slightly different wind threshold values: the live page gives 15.6, 13.6 and 10.5 m/s for its named service groups, while the PDF's table displays 15.5, 10, 10 and 13.5 m/s across its service columns.^[4]^[5] The headings in the PDF's extracted text do not expose a clean one-to-one mapping for every column, so the values are reported as a dated source conflict rather than reconciled by guesswork.
