Taoyuan Metro

Taoyuan Metro's operating Airport MRT and the separate Green Line project registry published by the city engineering bureau.

Stations

21 pages

Every station on this network, grouped by line — generated from the same registry that draws the maps.

Rolling Stock

Taoyuan Airport MRT's express and commuter train fleets.

Taoyuan Airport MRT rolling stock

Two fleets, an operator page that names neither's manufacturer, and a Wikipedia seat-count table that two independently read primary sources agree is wrong.

Technology

Taoyuan Airport MRT train-control and signalling records.

Taoyuan Airport MRT signalling and automation grade

WESTRACE interlocking and a CBTC-EP train-control layer, confirmed at last by a 2013 primary construction report — plus a British subcontractor named for the first time, and an automation grade this page still declines to publish because the one source carrying it cites nothing.

Facilities

Taoyuan Airport MRT station accessibility and maintenance depot records.

Taoyuan Airport MRT station accessibility

Wheelchair-space dimensions specified to the centimetre on every train, and station facilities described in detail — but no named regulation or completion figure anywhere on the operator's own page.

Taoyuan Airport MRT maintenance depots

Qingpu Depot doubles as headquarters and operations control centre; Luzhu Depot trailed it through 2013 construction on every measure a primary report gives — neither depot's site area has been found sourced anywhere.

Operations

Taoyuan Airport MRT ridership, passenger-volume and fare-history records.

Taoyuan Airport MRT ridership

Taipei Main Station carries more than double the next-busiest stop, no report ever splits express from commuter riders, and a Wikipedia ridership figure turns out to cite a 2017 opinion piece.

Taoyuan Airport MRT fare history

A 2 January 2025 season-pass overhaul replaced two older schemes outright — different formulas, different discount tiers, a fee-free exchange window — while the specific NT$ figures behind every formula stay out of reach of a static fetch.

Projects

Taoyuan metro land development mechanism records.

Taoyuan metro land development

The same two central laws Kaohsiung's programme cites, plus nine of Taoyuan's own implementing instruments — but a case-list page that three separate timeout attempts could not reach.

Taoyuan Metro lines

The Airport MRT operating line and the Green Line construction registry.

Two different data states

Taoyuan's current TDX operating record is the Airport MRT, while the Green Line is a construction project represented here by the Taoyuan engineering bureau's project page. The live TYMC TDX check returned the Airport MRT line and no Green Line line record on 24 August 2026.^[3] This system index keeps those data states separate so a planned station is not presented as a station with passenger service.

Green Line project

The Green Line project page publishes 21 planned stations, 27.8 kilometres, 10 underground stations and 11 elevated stations.^[1] The route starts at G01 in Bade, runs through Taoyuan and Luzhu, and branches toward Airport MRT A11 and A16.^[1] The bureau also publishes its feasibility, environmental-assessment and comprehensive-planning milestones, civil and systems packages, and a 2030 main-line target.^[1]

Reading the system

The Airport MRT pages use TDX-backed station, route, geometry, timetable and ridership material. The Green Line pages use a dated primary-research registry because the project has no corresponding current TYMC operating dataset in the checked TDX families.^[1] ^[3] Coordinates, live service, ridership, entrances, accessibility and rolling stock for the Green Line remain TBC. The approved planning-report record is linked from the line page for readers who need the deeper civil and financial documentation.^[2]

Source boundary

The system is an index of an operator line and a construction project, not a claim that they are equally mature datasets.^[3] [1] [2]

Systems and rolling stock

The Airport MRT line record `[/rail/tymc/lines/airport-mrt/]` and its 22 station pages cover the operating line — the current TDX line this page's own facts box names above^[3] — kept separate throughout from the Green Line's own project-registry pages. The signalling record `[/rail/tymc/technology/signalling/]` names the British firm at the centre of the Marubeni signalling dispute for the first time on this site, and declines to publish an automation grade that appears in Wikipedia infoboxes with no supporting citation. The rolling-stock record `[/rail/tymc/rolling-stock/fleet-roster/]` covers both the express and commuter fleets, including a case where two primary sources agree on a seat count that a Wikipedia table gets wrong. The accessibility record `[/rail/tymc/facilities/accessibility/]` and ridership record `[/rail/tymc/operations/ridership/]` cover station facilities in detail and station-level passenger volumes, including another caught Wikipedia miscitation. The fare history record `[/rail/tymc/operations/fares/]` covers a season-pass scheme the operator replaced outright in January 2025, with the base single fare itself still out of reach behind a tool this site's tooling cannot read. The land development record `[/rail/tymc/projects/joint-development/]` covers Taoyuan's own metro land-development mechanism and its full legal basis, though a case-list page at a known address resisted three separate fetch attempts.
