What is established

New Taipei's Transport Department records 13 Model T electric buses entering service on San Chung Bus route 857 on 19 September 2023^[1]. The source describes the vehicle as electric and places it on a named route with a named operator; it does not present this as a complete San Chung fleet register^[1].

The same release describes surround-view cameras, warnings for inner-wheel differences, electronic mirrors and passenger-facing route-request and stop-display equipment^[1]. It also records a municipal subsidy of NT$1.5 million for each bus^[1]. That is procurement/subsidy evidence for this deployment, not a claim that the same amount applies to every electric bus in Taiwan^[1].

Technical gaps

The fetched primary release does not identify a manufacturer, chassis, body builder, battery capacity, seating/standing capacity or charging standard, so those fields remain TBC. A vehicle approval sheet, tender specification or manufacturer technical data sheet naming this exact Model T deployment would settle them^[1].

The page therefore records propulsion, operator, route, quantity, date and subsidy without converting the marketing name "Model T" into an unsupported technical model number^[1].

Specifications

Manufacturer	TBC
Chassis and body	TBC
Passenger capacity	TBC
Per-bus subsidy	NT$1.5 million ^[1]
