Ferry

The Blue Highway — small, real, inside the fare system, and absent from almost every English account of Taipei transit.

Current Blue Highway routes, piers, operators and fare rules.

Blue Highway

The current Tamsui River and Keelung River passenger-boat network, with the official routes, operators, piers, fares and card rules kept separate where they differ.

Taipei has scheduled passenger boats. The Blue Highway routes on the Tamsui and Keelung rivers are small in ridership but they are genuine public transit — inside the regional fare ecosystem, which most English sources do not realise — and a transit guide that skipped them would be drawing the network's boundary in the wrong place.

Start with the Blue Highway guide for current routes, operators, piers, published fares, stored-value-card rules, and weather-dependent operation. The guide keeps the official timetable and fare conflicts visible instead of turning a changing river service into a single timeless schedule.
