TDX record

The committed TDX pull identifies this page as the operator record for Taipei ^[1] [/rail/thsx/stations/taipei/] Bus Co., Ltd. (臺北客運), with source municipality NewTaipei ^[1].

TDX publishes the record ID bus-operator-taipeibus-1m9ums8, operator code TaipeiBus, operator number 1407, phone 0800-003-307 and URL <http://www.tpebus.com.tw> [<http://www.tpebus.com.tw>] for this record ^[1].

This is a data record, not a claim that every TDX record with the same company name is a separate legal entity ^[1].

Company history and legal identity

臺北客運's own website traces the business to 1954, when it was called 文山輕便客運社; it says the business was reorganised as 文山汽車客運股份有限公司 in 1956 and took the name 臺北汽車客運股份有限公司 in June 1962 ^[2].

The current legal record is more precise than the public trading name: the Ministry of Economic Affairs registry identifies 臺北汽車客運股份有限公司 under unified business number 35505603, with registered offices at 新北市三重區重新路2段78號8樓 and 李博文 as representative ^[5]. The same record gives paid-in capital of NT$390 million and 39 million issued shares, and lists urban and highway passenger transport, vehicle repair and related transport-equipment activities among its registered businesses ^[5]. The registry lists the board's corporate representatives and share blocks, but it does not label a parent company ^[5].

The public label 首都客運集團 is narrower than a legal ownership chart. A 2024 New Taipei police release describes that group as 首都客運、臺北客運、大都會客運 and 三重客運, in the context of a traffic-safety publicity partnership ^[6]. That establishes the four-company membership stated by the government release; it does not, by itself, establish that Capital Bus is Taipei Bus's statutory parent ^[6].

Operating character and facilities

The operator describes its business as urban public-bus, highway-bus and national-route passenger transport serving Greater Taipei and parts of Keelung and Taoyuan [\[/rail/thsr/stations/taoyuan/\]](/rail/thsr/stations/taoyuan/) ^[3]. Its company profile publishes an operating snapshot of 20 Taipei joint-operation routes, 63 New Taipei routes, four highway or road passenger routes, 877 vehicles and 1,381 employees ^[3]. The numbers are retained as the operator's own snapshot because the committed TDX record measures route associations differently: this page's 126 New Taipei records are generated from the structured pull rather than substituted with the website's three-category count ^[1].

The profile names station sites including 板橋後站、四海站、三峽一站、三峽二站、南雅站、歡仔園站、樹林站、中和站、新店站、木柵站、中華站、五福站 and 三重二站, and names 冷水坑保養總廠 plus repair units at several operating sites ^[3]. The separate station page publishes addresses, phone numbers and route allocations for the facilities it details; examples include 四海站、南雅站、中和站、新店站、木柵站 and 三峽一站 ^[4]. Neither page gives a depot capacity or opening date, so those remain TBC rather than being inferred from route assignments ^[3] ^[4].

The fleet evidence is specific but incomplete. New Taipei's February 2023 release records 26 electric buses entering service on Taipei Bus route 656 and says the operator received NT$182 million to replace those 26 vehicles; the same release describes the route as the city's first fully electrified route at that point ^[7]. It does not identify the buses' manufacturer, chassis, body or passenger capacity, and TDX has no model field for this operator record ^[7] ^[1]. The page therefore describes the electric transition without inventing a model roster.

Service record and incidents

New Taipei's 2025 service-quality announcement lists 臺北客運 among four 優等 operators for the 113 second-period evaluation and says Taipei Bus and Capital Bus had each reached 16 consecutive years at that level ^[8]. This is an evaluation result, not a claim that every route or facility performed identically ^[8].

The record also includes a serious documented incident. New Taipei's transport bureau says a Taipei Bus 667 bus failed to yield to a pedestrian at the 壽德街 and 民德路 intersection in Zhonghe [\[/rail/metro/stations/y12/\]](/rail/metro/stations/y12/) on 19 August 2023, causing a fatality; the bureau says it imposed a NT$90,000 fine, suspended the vehicle plate and deducted service-evaluation points ^[9]. The release says the driver lost the licence and quotes the general manager acknowledging that the driver had not followed the company's stop-before-moving rule ^[9]. Separately, a Taipei audit report records three labour-law penalties against Taipei Bus in ROC years 111–113, totalling NT$270,000, with the source data compiled from the Ministry of Labor employer-penalty query system ^[10].

Research gaps

The current sources establish a public four-company group label, but not a statutory parent-company relationship; the parent field remains TBC ^[5] ^[6].

The operator and government pages establish a vehicle count snapshot and a 26-bus electric replacement, but no manufacturer/chassis/body/capacity roster for this operator; the model field remains TBC ^[3] ^[7].

The station sources establish published sites and some addresses, but not capacity or opening dates, and the sources read here do not publish a dated route-contract chronology ^[4] ^[1].
